SUBSTITUTE FOR WHEAT.

James A. Patton, the wheat and cotton specialist, upon his return from a tour of investigation of crop conditions abroad, informs us that a continuing shortage of wheat will start to be felt in a few days.

The crop this year, he says, will be the smallest of the decade and he paints a gloomy picture of conditions in France and other European countries.

While Mr. Patton calls himself a crop expert and credits his success in superior judgment in estimating production, he is generally regarded as a shrewd speculator with an aptitude for getting on the right side of the market and as not being overcautious in his methods of influencing market fluctuations. Very naturally the reputation with which his forecast of wheat production will be taken by the American people. Nevertheless his reputation is worthy of consideration.

The areas in which wheat has been planted out and there is not much likelihood that they will be very considerably increased. Improved methods of cultivation will in time increase the average production, but at present there is nothing in prospect to warrant the hope that production can for long keep pace with the increase of population.

And why not have a substitute for wheat? In re-examining we have an acceptable substitute for butter, corn syrup supplies a shortage of cane syrup, molasses is used in place of sugar, cotton oil is driving hard out of the market and cotton seed flour is destined to come into universal use as a substitute for meat.

So why not find something that will supply the food elements now found only in wheat?

There is apparently no limit to the production of corn and a wheat farmer can never become a millionaire so long as there is an abundance of corn. While every farmer, as now prepared, cannot entirely take the place of wheat flour, there is no reckoning what the miller and the chemist may do with it under the stress of a wheat famine. And there are vast possibilities of relief in the immense crops of better corn and molasses now being produced in the West. Already these grains are being converted into breakfast foods and it is not impracticable that some day the commercial chemist and the enterprising miller will devise a way to convert them into an acceptable substitute for wheat flour.

Nowhere on this globe is the discussion of a new grain which may take the place of corn as a food for livestock.

In the meantime it is gratifying to reflect that science is finding remedies for diseases of wheat and modern cultural methods are tending the wheat growers from the menace of drought and insect enemies.—Fort Worth Record.

CREDIT TO THEIR WIVES

Hoke Smith's majority over "Little Joe" Brown is 100, L. his three races for governor, in six years Hoke Smith has lived in the neighborhood of 90, two times each year. There was a talking of 10,000 votes this year in comparison with the total vote of two years ago and "Little Joe" was the loser. The Chicago Daily Leader says:

"Many a man who occupies high place in the political, social or commercial world, owes that position to the devotion and encouragement of a good wife. In fact, a majority, we believe, will admit that and give credit to their wives for their success. A case in point is given by the Dallas Times Herald, which says: 'Georgia Democrats have dismissed Little Joe Brown from the executive mansion. A victory for the Atlanta Journal. Two years ago Hoke Smith went down in defeat. Then it was a victory for the Atlanta Constitution. Now Hoke Smith is elected and Hoke Smith will win a senatorial term later or soon. Mrs. Smith will be the power behind the throne. Mrs. Smith forced her husband in the race four years ago. He won. Two years ago he lost. This year he was forced to resign and won. Mrs. Hoke Smith in the long ago said her husband someday would win the toga of a senator. He is on his way.'

Mrs. Hoke Smith is a woman both brilliant and ambitious. Her father was a famous lawyer and Democratic statesman. Hoke Smith is an able lawyer, but cares little for political honors. Mrs. Smith planned to make him governor of Georgia first and then a United States senator. He won the office of governor and was defeated for a second term by "Little Joe" Brown. Politicians said Smith would not come back, that he was down and out. Mrs. Smith said he would come back. He's back. Mrs. Smith says he will go to the United States senate if he lives. He is willing to bet on Mrs. Smith's judgment. But "Little Joe" must come back. He is a crusty old bachelor and writes impassioned poetry.—Dallas Times Herald.

IDEAL TARIFF AND ANTIGRAFT PLANKS.

The Hon. C. H. Randall of the Fourth congressional district was overwhelmingly re-nominated by the democrats of his district, and two of the planks of his platform are especially admirable. The first good plank is as to the tariff, and the second as to the proposed antigraft legislation, for his statesmanlike foresight, for which his real work is behind of him. The Chronicle has hitherto taken occasion to heartily commend Representative Randall.

The tariff plank is what should have been adopted by the state convention. It is a perfect democracy, pure and unadorned, contained in the treasury of the "protection" democrat and the platform of the "democrat." Here is the ideal tariff plank, to which every true democrat can subscribe with all his heart, and to which all calling themselves democrats, especially congressmen, both representatives and senators, should be required to subscribe throughout this nation as a test of party allegiance. "We believe in a tariff for revenue only, and we appeal to the democrats and all honest men in every section and every state to rally with one accord to this cardinal principle, laying aside any differences as to matters of mere detail, to the end that victory may crown our efforts and the democratic party may justly receive the laurel for the best interests of the whole country."

The antigraft measure is intended to stop the malfeasance of public officials who as lawyers take fees from corporations affected by proposed legislation. Here it is and no just man can say that it is not both drastic and right. "Believing that public servants should represent the people only in all matters connected with the public service, we reaffirm our pledge to promote legislation prohibiting members of congress from receiving gifts, employment, fees or compensation from public service corporations and others interested in legislation during their terms of service."

There were delegates present who were opposed to these two planks, but fortunately they were in a minority. The convention voted to adopt the platform as a whole. Mr. Randall, in thanking the democrats of his district for the trust reposed in him, said that the tariff expression in the platform was peculiarly pleasing to him, and also that plank which commended his efforts toward serving the public servants from serving corporations. He declared that the latter measure was directed at no individual; that there was nothing personal in it, and that he had advocated it ever since he became a member of congress. Mr. Randall of Texas is a statesman who has already made his mark, and in the coming contest he will be found in the front rank, fighting on the right side.—Houston Chronicle.

HEALTH A NATIONAL ASSET.

Every day and every hour in the year about 5,000,000 persons lie dangerously ill in the United States. Fully half of this illness is preventable.

Three-fourths of tuberculosis, from which 100,000 Americans die annually, could be avoided.

If each life lost is appraised at only $100, and each year's average earnings for adults is only $700, the economic gain from preventing preventable disease, measured in dollars, exceeds one and a half millions.

Prof. Fisher's report said: Eighteen experts in various diseases, as well as vital statisticians, have contributed data on the ratio of preventable disease to the cause of death in to which mortality may be classified. From this data it is found that fifteen years at least could be added to the average human lifetime by applying the science of preventing disease. More than half of the additional life would come from the prevention of tuberculosis, typhoid and five other diseases, the prevention of which could be accomplished by pure air, water and milk, to Lawrence, Mass., after the installation of a pure water supply, the death rate from typhoid was reduced by 88 per cent. For every death thus saved from typhoid, two or three deaths are saved from other diseases.

Prof. Fisher reported that the length of life is increasing wherever sanitary science and preventive medicine are applied. Statistics show that the average duration of life in India is less than twenty-five years; in Sweden, more than fifty years; and in Massachusetts, forty-five years, and that in Europe it has doubled in three and one-half centuries. In Massachusetts life is lengthening at the rate of fourteen years per cent, or about one-half the rate of Germany.—Dallas News.
